--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--

Roula and Caroline are both fifteen years old. They are pen friends. That means that they write to each other often. But they don't write letters – they send e-mails from their computers.

Roula lives in Patras, in Greece, and Caroline lives in Plymouth, in England. They started writing to each other three years ago, in 2001, but they didn't meet until 2003.

Last year, Roula's parents invited Caroline to come and visit Roula in Greece. Caroline stayed with Roula and her family for two weeks in the summer, and they had a fantastic time. They went to the beach every day, and in the evening they sometimes went for a walk and sometimes went to the cinema or a café.

Roula and Caroline still write to each other all the time. This summer, Roula is going to the UK to stay with Caroline. "I know we're going to have lots of fun," says Roula. "And I know we're going to be friends forever."
